

Salt Lake shaker

Power inside and late good fortune allow Zags to edge Wildcats, move on

COLIN MULVANY/THE SPOKESMAN-REVIEW

Gonzaga forward Zach Collins dunks the ball over Northwestern guard Scottie Lindsey during the first half of Saturday's second-round game in Salt Lake City.

NO TIME TO ASSIGN BLAME

John Blanchette points out that ex-NCAA Tournament darling Gonzaga might be filling the role of villain this time, but the Bulldogs can't be held responsible for the officials' noncall that hurt Northwestern's chance at a complete rally. PAGE 6

NOT OVER UNTIL IT'S OVER

As Vince Grippi notes, some TV commentators jumped the gun when they asserted that Gonzaga had Saturday's game against Northwestern in the bag at halftime, which became evident when the Wildcats caught fire in the second half. PAGE 7

Sooners outlast Gonzaga women

Gonzaga's trip to the women's NCAA Tournament ended quickly on Saturday in Seattle as the Oklahoma Sooners used 3-point shooting to assume a big lead and ultimately wore down the Bulldogs for a 75-62 victory. Gonzaga ended the season 26-7. PAGE 5
